Hiking and Kayaking - D & R Canal and Carnegie

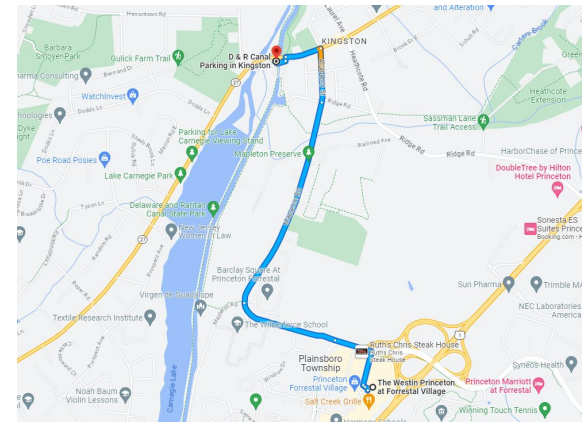

During the early 19th century, canals were built as transportation routes to link manufacturing centers and markets. The Delaware and Raritan (D&R) Canal was constructed across central New Jersey to provide an efficient route for transporting freight between Philadelphia and New York City. The two cities selected as the canal's two terminuses were Bordentown on the Delaware River and New Brunswick on the Raritan River. Water is supplied to the main canal via a 22-mile-long feeder canal that was dug adjacent to the Delaware River beginning at Bulls Island and continuing south.
